

A lively mix from Pink Inc.'s Free-Form series, Kites and Diamonds create a multi-layered stage set backdrop ideal for creative lighting design and projection. Fabric structures are easy-to-use and cost-effective design solutions for event planners and designers—a win-win for everyone.

Think free-form stretch fabric shapes for holiday décor. Here the Diamond form is used as a creative ceiling treatment, which takes an ordinary tent interior to a whole new and exciting place.

This dynamically rigged architectural installation creates an intimate and visually interesting environment. The designer of this installation received so much positive feedback about these forms that the company decided to incorporate the Diamond imagery into their logo.

Used as an in-store projection surface, the Diamonds both accent and reshape the interior of Saks 5th Avenue. Beautiful on their own, these tension fabric shapes add an elegant look while giving the client a unique branding surface.
